Mandate of First Nation Policing Agreement

1. Under Clause 4(a)(IV) the agreement provides for a First Nation to police its community with First Nation Constables supported by the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP);
2. Also under Clause 33 (c) of the Agreement provides that where a community chooses to police with First Nation Constables, supported by the OPP, the First Nation will be the employer of the First Nation Constables;
3. It also provides that the First Nation Governments and the OPP shall jointly administer the police service;
4. The OPP performs a variety of administrative functions in support of the community's police service including management of pay and benefits for the First Nation Constables;
5. The OPP uses its existing procurement arrangements to acquire necessary policing equipment for use in the First Nation;
6. The OPP does not provide these services in the capacity of an employer;
7. First Nation communities have not been given the authority to appoint First Nation Constables. There is no provision for this in the Police Services Act;
8. The Commissioner of the OPP exercises this statutory discretion independently of the Ontario First Nations Policing Agreement;

- a. The First Nations Constables are required under the authority of the Commissioner to enforce and uphold the laws of the Province of Ontario and the Criminal Code;
9. The purpose of the appointment is to provide the First Nations Constables with the policing authority he/she requires to perform his/her employment responsibilities for the First Nation Community;

18. As the employer the community will be impacted by any decision to remove the First Nations Constable's policing authority;
19. A decision by the Commissioner to terminate a First Nation Constable's appointment is not a decision to terminate his/her employment;
20. The community, as the employer, must address employment issues;
21. In R. v. Stephens the Ontario Court of Appeals found that the policing authority of First Nations Constable's was not limited to the reserve territory they were appointed to police;
 - a. The Court of Appeal determined that it was the Police Services Act and the Commissioner's appointment under Section 54 that created the legal authority to act in the capacity of a police officer and the OFNPA could not have the effect of limiting the policing authority of First Nations Constables;
 - b. The Supreme Court of Canada came to similar conclusion in the case of R. v. Decorte;
 - c. In this decision the First Nations Constables were authorized to conduct a RIDE program off-reserve the court found that they were appointed for the Province of Ontario, they had the authority and duties of a police officer and they satisfied the definition of peace officer in the Criminal Code, their policing authority was not limited to the reserve territory they were hired to police;
22. First Nations Constables are not subject to the disciplinary process in the Police Services Act, which is applicable to police officers in Ontario;
23. The Professional Standards Bureau of the OPP conducts disciplinary investigations of police officers under the Police Services Act;
24. Where the community, as the employer, undertakes a disciplinary process in regards to a First Nations Constable, it is involved in a purely employment law process;

25. Where the behaviour of concern to the community impacts on the suitability of the continued appointment of the individual as a First Nations Constable the Professional Standards Bureau could conduct an investigation on behalf of the Commissioner pursuant to Section 54 of the Police Services Act;
26. As part of the consultation process the results of the Professional Standards Bureau investigation could be shared with the community and used to address the issue of employment discipline.
- Excerpt from the Ontario First Nations Policing Program – April 20, 2009

*Mississauga First Nation will be notified and a consultation will take place with the local detachment management of any disciplinary action deemed necessary.

SECTION 4 – COMPLAINTS

Complaints against a Member of Chief and Council and/or Council as a Whole

Date Approved: July 30, 2014	Band Council Resolution: 012-14-15
Date Last Reviewed: September 11, 2013 December 12, 2013, March 18, 2014, July 9, 2014	Amendment Date Approval: August 8, 2018

Policy

Mississauga First Nation Chief and Council are committed to the membership who elected them into office and have an obligation to address community and/or membership concerns in a timely manner. Complaints vary in severity and complexity therefore a consistent and fair handling of all inappropriate behaviour will follow a defined process. It is important to ensure this procedure is accessible and user-friendly for the membership.

Procedure

Informal Complaints

Informal procedures are intended to solve problems quickly rather than proceeding to an investigation and substantiating of complaints. The purpose is to seek agreement and a shared understanding and develop methods to avoid problems in the future. Informal complaints procedures are appropriate when:

- a. The person complaining wants to do it informally;
- b. The allegations are less serious;
- c. There is a chance of quickly stopping the problem before it develops;

Informal Complaints Procedure

1. Observation of unacceptable behaviour and take action, even though no one has complained;
2. Observe unacceptable behaviour and take action, even though no-one has complained;
3. The person complaining deals with it themselves but may seek advice from a member of the complaints committee;
4. The person complaining asks the complaint committee deal with it and they jointly or individually after consulting the other members confidentially convey the concerns to the person being complained about without making any judgements, and re-state policy;
5. The person lodging the complaint negotiate individually to reach agreement;
6. The complaint committee bring the two sides together to conciliate, and the issue is resolved without investigation;

Formal Complaints

Formal procedures are for substantiating a complaint with evidence, or at least bringing the individuals involved together to try to reach a satisfactory outcome for all.

Formal action is usually appropriate when:

- a. The person complaining wants to do it formally;
- b. Informal attempts have failed;
- c. The allegations are serious;
- d. Discipline is a possible outcome if the allegations are substantiated;
- e. The allegations are denied and the person complaining wants to try to substantiate them;
- f. The person complaining has been victimised for complaining.

Procedure

1. Document every step to ensure consistency and fairness
2. interview the person complaining and document the allegations
3. inform the person being complained about of the details, and ask them to respond
4. if the facts are disputed, seek more information including evidence from any witnesses
5. find whether the complaint has substance
6. report the process, the evidence, the finding and recommend an outcome
7. implement the outcome or decide on other action.

The staff involved can have support people with them at any interviews or meetings.

Be impartial

It is important for anyone investigating or mediating a complaint not to jump to any conclusions but to hear both sides of the story. This means being fair to both people involved in a complaint throughout the investigation.

The person the complaint is against must be:

- given all the information about the complaint, including the name of the person making the complaint
- given the opportunity to present their side of the story
- told of their right to seek support (from their union, for example).

Considering evidence

There are often no witnesses to discrimination and harassment. In dealing with a formal complaint, you may need to consider surrounding evidence such as:

- supporting evidence from other staff, family or medical professionals
- reports of changes in behaviour or performance
- requests for transfers, shift changes or increased sick leave
- complaints from other staff
- records kept by the person complaining
- consistency of the evidence presented by the people involved
- no evidence where logically it should exist.

A formal complaint of discrimination or harassment should not be dismissed because no-one saw or heard the incident.
